

You are new to the area and do not know many people. In fact, you are feeling very lonely right now. So you decide to try and meet people. You go to a local festival in the hopes of meeting some nice people.

You do not own many things, but your most prized possession in the whole world is this apple. You take the apple to the festival with you but you have no intention at all of letting anyone else have it, or even of sharing it. You could hide your apple or otherwise conceal it, or carry it proudly with you while at the festival.

You are now at the festival with your apple. Start mingling with the people and try to make some new friends.

You are at a local festival which is crowded with people. You want nothing more than to gain possession of an apple. You notice several people with apples milling about. Your mission is to get an apple away from someone. You could charm it out of them, guilt them out of it, coerce them into giving you the apple, or even use brute force to get the apple -- it doesn't matter. You just want that apple, any way you can get it. Start mingling now to choose from whom you will take the apple.